A BOMB!

And Fires it Right Into the Anarchists In a Manner to Make Them Fear Hemp.

THE ANARCHISTS.

The Leading State Witness on the Stand.

CHICAGO, July 21.—In the anarchist trial to-day, William Selliger, who is regarded as a principal witness for the state, was put on the witness stand. The court room was crowded. Selliger testified he lived on Sedgewick street; had as a boarder Louis Lingg, a defendant; on Monday night the witness attended a meeting of the carpenters' union at Zepf's hall.

"After the revenge circular was distributed, did you go to work Tuesday?"

"No."

"What did you do that morning?"

"I got up at 7:30 a. m., when Lingg came. I had previously told him that I wanted those bombs removed from my house. He told me to work diligently at them and they would be taken away that day. I took some coffee and after awhile I worked at some bad shells, filling the holes.

"Look at the shells I show you (handing witness a leaden sphere about the size of a small turnip). Did you work at these shells?"

"Yes."

"What did you do?"

"I drilled the holes. It took me about half an hour."

"Where was Lingg at a meeting?"

"On the west side. He came back about one o'clock."

"Did you speak to him?"

"He said I did not work very much, I should have done more."

"I told him I had no pleasure in the work. Then he said 'we will work harder this afternoon.'"

The witness described how he, Lingg, Huebner, Menzenberg and Hewman all worked at the bomb and gas pipe machines.

On Tuesday evening Lingg said the bombs should be ready that night as they were to be used then. They were filled with dynamite and provided with caps and put in a trunk and carried by witness Lingg and Wuzenberg to Lepf's hall on Clybourn avenue. The box was opened at Nepp's and several people took bombs. Lingg, Thilen, Gustav, Lehman and two others were with the witness, going to the north side, where it had been arranged to have a meeting. Lingg wanted to throw a bomb into a patrol wagon on the way, but the witness prevented him. When he went home he heard of the Haymarket affair and hid the bombs under the sidewalk. The witness often heard Engle say every working man should make bombs.

On cross-examination the witness said he had been made no promises by the state's attorney or officials, who simply told him he had better tell the truth. He did not know his testimony or statements would prevent his being tried for murder. The cross-examination was severe and searching, but the witness' testimony remained unshaken.

The Bill Against the Wabash Heard.

CHICAGO, July 21.—The bill in equity brought by Charles H. Beers against the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific railway and the receivers, asking the appointment of a special receiver for the Chicago division, was considered by Judge Gresham, of the United States circuit court yesterday. Judge

Gresham expressed in strong terms his disapprobation of the appointment of receivers remote from the property to be conserved. The bondholders asked the court to have a special receiver appointed to take evidence as to the present management of the property, with a view of having a special receiver appointed for the Chicago division. The court took the matter under advisement.

DEATH'S CRASH.

Seven Persons Lose Their Lives Near Columbia, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, July 21.—News of a most terrible collision near Columbia, Tenn., on the Louisville and Nashville road has just reached here.

The collision occurred in a deep cut, with a sharp curve making it impossible to see each other; hence the collision took place while both trains were running at full speed. Both engines are a total wreck. The following is a list of the killed:

Henry Lauman and Robert Brown, engineer and fireman of the accommodation train.

Thad Beech and Pat King, engineer and fireman of Engine No. 519.

Monroe Wilson, baggage master.

Al. B. Robertson, of Louisville, Ky., passenger agent, formerly ticket agent of the Louisville and Nashville road at this point, who was riding on the engine.

Section Foreman Thomason, of the Nashville and Florence railroad, who was riding on engine 519.

There were only two passengers injured—the Rev. William H. Green, who was in the smoking car, and was thrown against a seat, cutting a gash over his right eye, not serious. The other a colored girl, name unknown, was slightly wounded.

The sight of the bodies is most horrible, they being torn to pieces and scalded by the escaping steam. It will probably be late to-morrow before the wreck is cleared.

A FEAST OF SONG.

Opening of the North American Sengerfest.

MILWAUKEE, July 21.—Delightful weather marks the opening day of the twenty-fourth festival of the North American Sengerbund. The city is full of strangers and trains are arriving hourly with large additions. It is estimated that between 10,000 and 12,000 people will arrive from Chicago and St. Louis to-day. Decorations are general and elaborate, the principal ones being on business streets where every merchant and shop owner vies with his neighbor in making his store attractive. From every flag staff in the city a flag flies, many foreign standards being displayed as well as the stars and stripes.

Shot by Horse Thieves.

St. Louis, July 21.—A special from Little Rock, Arkansas, to the Post Dispatch, says: "James C. Cook and Frederick Gerhart, living in Montgomery county, were shot and killed by horse thieves last Monday night, who were in the act of stealing the farmers' horses. The thieves, seven in number, escaped."

More Riots at Marseilles.

LONDON, July 21.—The royalist rioting at Marseilles continued yesterday and last night. The militia at midnight charged on the mob, capturing 200 rioters and turned them over to the police. Ten persons were wounded.

For any number of years, while Judge Davis was on the Supreme bench, and in the Senate, his daily luncheon consisted of two apples, a ginger cookie and a glass of milk, which cost him never more than ten cents, and were always eaten precisely at the same hour, standing before the counter of an old woman called "Dyspepsia Mary," who for years years sold pies and cakes in the Senate corridor. She always selected the best apples in her basket for him and laid them carefully to one side; and he got a larger allowance of milk than the other customers, a mug being kept for his special use.

HOW GREELEY CAME TO BE NOMINATED.

"Did you know," said a New York member of Congress this morning, "that the nomination of Horace Greeley for the Presidency in 1872 was the result of a blunder, and that those who were surprised the most were the very people who had done the most to bring it about? It is an interesting story. If you remember, it required great effort on the part of Lyman Trumbull, Carl Schurz, and the other friends of the Liberal movement to enlist Mr. Greeley's sympathies in the cause. When he did so, however, we Democrats felt that we had secured a powerful ally, and our hearts warmed, as it were, to our old enemy of the Tribune. Shortly after this the Democratic Liberal Convention was held at Cincinnati. The New York delegation was not pledged to any candidate, but the prevailing sentiment was that David Davis, of Illinois, would be the most acceptable man to pit against Gen. Grant. Mr. Davis was very popular with the moneyed classes of the East. He was a man of high character and broad attainments, and we believed his candidacy would give us a good fighting chance of securing the electoral vote of Illinois. But we felt very grateful to Mr. Greeley. We decided, therefore, that we would give him a complimentary vote in the convention as an expression of our kindly regard. We went out to Cincinnati in a special train, with drums beating and flags flying, seventy two delegates, and probably 200 others who had no business there, but wanted to see the fun. As soon as we arrived we began talking Greeley. This was done for a lark, you must remember, but we talked about him so much that we soon started a great boom for him. We concluded, however, that this would do us no harm, and that, at the proper moment, he could be quietly set aside, when we would bend our energies, first, to the nomination of David Davis, or failing in that, the nomination of Charles Francis Adams. The Kentucky delegation was headed by Cassius M. Clay. They had no candidate, but they had heard so much talk about Horace Greeley around New York headquarters that they believed we were honestly in favor of the old man, and, to our horror, when that State was called, what did Clay do but announce that Kentucky had cast her twenty-six votes for Horace Greeley. As we had pledged our first vote to Mr. Greeley we were bound to make good the promise, and when New York's seventy-two votes followed Kentucky's twenty-six, the convention became wild with excitement, and from that time until the roll call was finished nothing could be heard but shouts for Greeley. We attempted to check the tide on the next ballot, but it was too late. Greeley was nominated on the second ballot, and the maddest set of men in Cincinnati that night were the members of the New York delegation, whose choice was David Davis, of Illinois.—Washington letter.

THE DOCTOR WAS RIGHT.

A Boston physician was called out of a sound slumber one night to answer the telephone. "Hello! what is it?" he asked, little pleased at the idea of leaving his comfortable bed. "Baby is crying, doctor, what shall I do?" came across the wire. "Oh! perhaps it's a pin," suggested the doctor, recognizing the voice of a young mother, one of his patients. "No," was the reply; "I'm sure it can't be that." "Perhaps he has the colic," returned the doctor, with well simulated solicitude. "No, I don't think so," replied the anxious mother; "he doesn't act that way." "Then perhaps he's hungry," said the doctor, as a last resort. "Oh, I'll see," came across the wires, and then all was still. The doctor went back to bed and was soon asleep again. About half an hour afterwards he was again awakened by the violent ringing of the telephone bell. Jumping out of bed and placing the receiver to his ear, he was shocked by the following message: "You are right, doctor; baby was hungry."

A COLLEGE paper recently criticised very severely the students who act as waiters in the summer hotels. It thinks the practice is unworthy of young men who expect to occupy an honorable position in the world. This, says the Boston Journal, depends upon the motive. If a needy collegian, who is anxious to earn money to secure an education, gains a few dollars as a waiter in a summer hotel it can not be regarded as an unworthy act. We sat opposite to a gentleman at a White Mountain hotel last summer, who holds an honorable and responsible position, who did not think it reflected upon his manhood to state that he was once a waiter in the same hotel where he was then a guest.

HOOSIER DEMOCRATS.

They Will Nominate a Winning Ticket August 11.—The Outlook Good.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 21.—The democratic state central committee, at its meeting held here yesterday, decided that the state convention should be held Wednesday, August 11.

There were present the following members of the state committee:

Eb Henderson, Fifth district, chairman; J. L. Riley, Third district, secretary; First district, W. B. McDonald; Second district, H. V. Norval; Third district, Joseph L. Riley; Fourth district, C. Ewing, jr.; Fifth district, Eb Henderson; Sixth district, I. P. Gray; Seventh district, Jackson Landers; Eighth district, Dr. W. H. Gillum; Ninth district, Elwood Avery; Tenth district, John C. Odell, elected in place of A. P. Crampton, resigned; Eleventh district, D. B. Sweetzer; Twelfth district, Eli B. Gerber; Thirteenth district, John C. Wagner. The following members of the executive committee were also present: Joseph E. McDonald and James H. Rice. Francis T. Hord was elected a member in the place of Edward Hawkins, resigned, and W. J. Craig in place of C. A. Zollinger, resigned.

The trouble arising from congressional fights was discussed at some length by prominent members of the party at a general meeting before the state committee assembled. The state committee, after considering the question for nearly three hours decided that it had no power to interfere in congressional fights, but adopted a resolution asking the state convention to give it the requisite authority.

It was practically agreed before the meeting was called at 2 o'clock, that August 11 would be the proper day for the convention to meet. The representation will be one delegate to every 200 votes cast for Governor Gray, giving a convention of 1,225 delegates, with 44 votes from Allen county.

All the politicians drawn hither by the opportunity afforded by the meeting for consultation avow a belief that the democracy will sweep the state sure. Chairman Henderson says: "Our chances for victory are excellent. We are harmonious and enthusiastic. The troubles in the congressional districts do not effect the state organization. There is no more local trouble now than there was two years ago, and then we gained forty-five majority in the legislature. We will carry the legislature this year, without doubt."

"Who will be your senator?"

"Why, the nominee of the caucus, of course. There are several gentlemen who are said to be candidates, including Senator McDonald, Governor Gray and probably Congressman Holman.

Among the candidates in town are J. E. McCullough, of Princeton (Menzie's opponent); Senator McMullen, of Dearborn, candidate for attorney general; Charlie Munson, Allen county's candidate for auditor of state; Judge James Brannan, candidate for congress in the eleventh district; John Peary, candidate for state treasurer from Putnam county; Dr. A. B. Pitzer, of Tipton, who wants to be auditor of state; Will P. Hawk, of Jay county, candidate for clerk of the supreme court, and Tom Byrnes, of Vanderburg, candidate candidate for treasurer of state.

Senator McMullen thinks the democracy can not lose the state ticket, "and even if it does," he said to-day, pointing to a map of the late gerrymander, "even if we do lose the state by 10,000 majority, we will carry the legislature." He says that Holman will certainly be a candidate for senatorial honors. McDonald and Gray are also in the field and all are, he thinks, formidable.

Chairman Henderson says that there will be no reorganization until after the meeting of the state convention, at which time the various delegations from the respective congressional districts will select committeemen. When reorganization occurs the probabilities now seem to be that the present officers will be continued.

REPUBLICANS.

They Misrepresent the Democracy Party and Formulate a Policy.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Albert Griffin, chairman of the organizing committee of the anti-saloon republicans, has issued a call for a conference, to be held in Chicago, September 16th. It says: "Each state is requested to elect four times as many delegates and alternates as it has senators and representatives in congress, and territories can send as many as they would be entitled to if they were states.

The promoters of this movement, the call says, believe that as the democratic party has become the protector of the saloon interests, the republican party ought, as a matter of right, become the avowed defender of the home against the saloon. It is not intended to ask the party to commit itself nationally to or against any specified law, but to announce as its settled policy that it will everywhere strive to reduce the business of dram selling and the evils resulting from it, as much as possible. Each state is to decide for itself from time to time, what laws are best adapted to secure the end in view.

The call further says that more than one-half of the republican members of the senate and a large number of the congressmen and party leaders have expressed themselves in favor of this policy. During the past two months arrangements have been made to insure delegations from nine states, to-wit: Kansas, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, Vermont, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine and Rhode Island, and it is hoped that all the northern and some of the southern states will be represented.

WATERING STOCK.

The C. H. and D. Officials say the Idea is Absurd.

CINCINNATI, July 21.—Since the change in the management of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad, there have been frequent assertions that stock is to be watered, and that Vice-President Waite, general manager for the past four years, is to be displaced. Concerning these rumors, President Stainer and Vice-President Ives, who are now here, say denial cannot be made too strong in regard to General Manager Waite. He will be retained. As to watering stock they declared that absurd. They had fully examined the condition and value of the road and had no intention of doing anything but to let it earn to its full capacity and to continue its present management. They are satisfied with their investment and wondered that Cincinnati holders consented to part with it.

It was announced that the Thomas Paine Society of Frederick County, Maryland, would celebrate the seventy-ninth anniversary of Tom Paine's death at the house of Aaron Davis, near Frederick; but not a celebrator appeared. Mr. Davis himself observed the day by not working. He said that, while there were only about a dozen members of the society, there were three or four hundred believers of the Paine doctrines in the country, but fear of social ostracism or injury to their business caused them to make a secret of their views.

It is an extraordinary fact that those who get to high words generally use low language.

WASHINGTON.

Congress will Adjourn July 28.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Mr. Morrison's concurrent resolution was reported from the ways and means committee providing for an adjournment of congress July 28 and was passed by a vote of 145 to thirty-six.

Senator Hoar, from the committee on judiciary, to-day reported favorably a bill to repeal the tenure of the office act. The repeal is not, however, to affect any officer heretofore suspended under the provisions of said sections or any designation, nomination, or appointment heretofore made by virtue of the provisions thereof.

The United States Senate passed the oleomargarine bill, but considerably amended as it came from the house. The tax is reduced from five to two cents. A conference committee will endeavor to settle the differences between the two houses.

The senate then resumed consideration of the Payne case.

An Old Man Marries His Adopted Daughter.

GREENSBURG, Ky., July 21.—Clem Bishop, aged seventy, was married on Monday to Retta Boston, his ward, aged not over nineteen. Bishop is a back-woods doctor and preacher, possibly without a diploma or license. His wife died two weeks ago and the neighbors threatened to take from him this girl whom he had adopted. To thwart them he procured a license and was married by David Judd. He presented a certificate from the girl to obtain the license that she was twenty-seven years of age. The official who gave the license suspected something wrong and sent a messenger to recall it, but he reached the place just after the marriage ceremony had been performed.

A LITTLE SUFFERER

Cleansed, Purified, and Beautified by the Cuticura Remedies.

It affords me pleasure to give you this report of the cure of our little grandchild by you. When six months old his left hand began to swell and had every appearance of a large boil. We polished it, but it did no purpose. About five months after became a running sore. Sore oozed out on each hand, and as his blood became more and more impure it took less time for them to break out. A sore came on the chin, beneath the under lip, which was very offensive. His head was one solid scab, discharging a great deal. This was his condition at twenty-two months old, when I undertook the care of him, his mother having died when he was a little more than a year old, of consumption (scrofula of course). He could walk a little, but could not get up the hill down, and could not walk when in bed, having no use of his hands. I immediately commenced with Cuticura Remedies, using the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap freely, and when he had taken one bottle of the Cuticura Resolvent, his head was completely cured, and he was improved in every way. We were very much encouraged, and continued the use of the Remedies for a year and a half. One sore after another healed, a bony matter forming in each one of these five deep ones just before healing, which would finally grow loose and were taken out; then they would heal rapidly. One of these ugly bone formations I preserved. After taking a dozen and a half bottles he was completely cured, and is now, at the age of six years, a strong and healthy child. The scars on his hands, though we once feared he would never be able to use them. All that the physicians did for him did him no good. All who saw the child before using the Cuticura Remedies and see the child now, consider it a wonderful cure. If the above facts are of any use to you, you are at liberty to use them.

Catarrhal Dangers.

To be freed from the dangers of suffocation while lying down; to breathe freely, sleep soundly and undisturbed; to rise refreshed, head clear, brain active and free from pain or ache; to know that no poisonous, putrid matter lies beneath the throat, ready to break out in catarrh of the throat, lungs, or stomach; to feel that the system does not, through its veins and arteries, suck up the poison that is sure to undermine and destroy; is indeed a blessing beyond all other human enjoyments. To purchase immunity from such a fate should be the object of all afflicted. But physicians have tried many remedies and physicians despair of relief or cure.

Sanford's Radical Cure meets every phase of Catarrh, from a simple head cold to the most loathsome and destructive stages. It is local and constitutional. Instantly effective, permanent in curing, safe, economical and never-failing.

Sanford's Radical Cure consists of one bottle of the Radical Cure, one box of Catarrhal Solvent, and one Improved Inhaler, all wrapped in one package, with full directions, and sold by all druggists for $1.00.

LITERARY WORKSHOPS

OF WASHINGTON AND THE HABITS OF THEIR OWNERS.

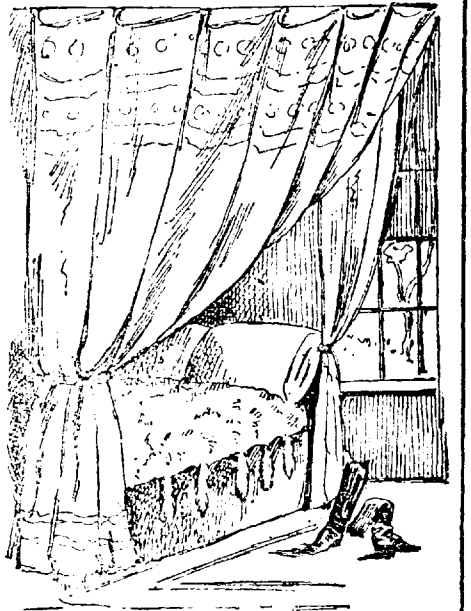

Frances Hodgson Burnett, Emma Southworth, and Mrs. Admiral Dahlgren—Joaquin Miller's Eccentricities. Librarian Spofford's Activity.

(Special Correspondence.)
WASHINGTON, July 19.—Washington has become one of the great literary centers of the United States, and it has turned out some of the most noted books and book writers in the country. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was written by Harriet Beecher Stowe for a Washington paper. Mark Twain penned "The Innocents Abroad" by the heat of a sheet iron stove while he was a Washington correspondent, and Constance Fenimore Woolson was living in modest rooms on New York avenue at the capital when she wrote "Anne," the novel which gave her her greatest reputation. The copy for this book was bundled up for her by a congressman, who was a friend of mine, and he tells me he sent it off to Harpers in a shoe box, expecting it to come out in book form. The Harpers used it as a serial, and it was published in the "Century" magazine. It was here that Walt Whitman wrote "The Leaves of Grass," and Mary Halleck Foote, the authoress of some of the best novels lately published, is a sister of Senator Hawley's wife, and she spends many of her winters in Washington.

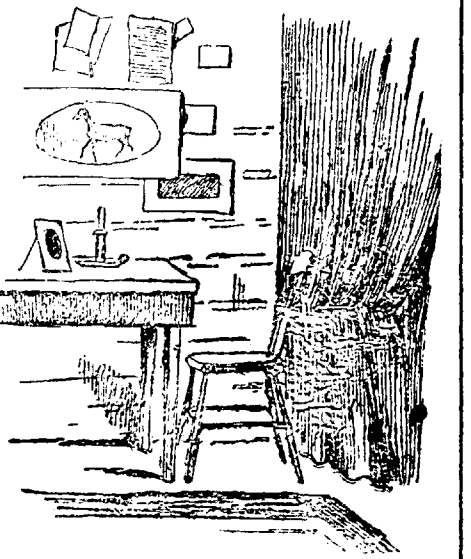

MRS. BURNETT'S HOME.

Tom Benton wrote his "Thirty years in the United States Senate" in an old, brown, stuccoed house of four stories on C street, and it was in this house that he penned his abridgement of "The Debates of Congress." James G. Blaine wrote the first volume of his "Twenty Years in Congress" in three different houses of Washington. He began it while he was living next to Gen. Beale, and just above the house where Mrs. Sickles used to live with Barton Key. He continued it in his great mansion on Dupont's circle, which he now rents to a Chicago millionaire for $10,000 a year, and he completed it in Senator Winthrop's big brick, just across from where Secretary Endicott lives, and facing Scott's circle. Sam Cox wrote his "Three Decades of Federal Legislation" in his pretty green stone house on Dupont circle, which he sold for $50,000 cash before he left for Turkey, and George Bancroft has written a great part of his historical work in his roomy brick residence, which looks out upon H street, just above the palace of the millionaire Corcoran.

JOAQUIN MILLER'S CABIN.

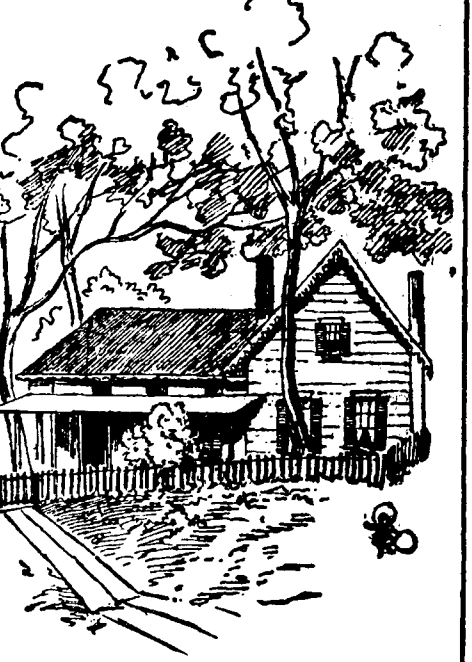

There is a great deal of literary work being done here all the time, and in this letter I will take you into a few of the literary workshops, and show you how some writers live and work. Frances Hodgson Burnett has a pretty house on I street, just below the house in which Gen. Garfield lived while he was a member of congress. Her home is a three-story red brick, and its interior, though not large, is furnished with artistic taste. Curious furniture, old weapons and pretty bric-a-brac are seen everywhere, and Mrs. Burnett seems to have a passion for old oriental rugs, for she has them of every size, and uses them both on the floor and on her sofas. She does her literary work in the attic, where she has a room which she calls her den. She writes easily, is not particular about pencils, and often jots down her ideas on odd scraps of paper. Mrs. Burnett is a rather pretty blonde, and her years are, I suppose, under the forties. She is of medium height, has dark autumn hair, a broad forehead and pleasant blue eyes. She told me once she could not remember the time that she began writing, and that her first story, entitled "Miss Carruthers' Engagement," she wrote when she was 15. She received $20 for this from Mrs. Godey, of the Lady's Book, and soon furnished them another, for which she got $35. After a time she became acquainted with Peterson, of Peterson's Magazine, and it was only a few years ago that she got into The Century. Her books now sell as well as those of any novelist of to-day, and her inducements to write have been so great that she overtaxed herself about two years ago, and has not been very well since. She wrote the story which is now coming out in St. Nicholas under the title of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" two years ago, and has done but little since then. Mrs. Burnett is married, and her husband is a black-eyed doctor who looks like an artist, and who is said to have considerable artistic taste. She has two very pretty blonde-haired little boys, and her home is a happy one.

PROSPECT COTTAGE, MRS. SOUTHWORTH'S HOME.

Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth is another Washington novelist, and she is perhaps the most prolific writer in the country. She is 66 years old, and has written a novel for every year of her life. All of her work is taken by Robert Bonner, of The Ledger, and she has not furnished a page of manuscript to any other publisher for years. It is said that Bonner pays her $10,000 a year for everything that she writes, but I have no basis for this statement except rumor. There is no doubt but that she is well paid, and the cottage which she owns here on the Georgetown Heights, though it lacks paint, is covered with vines, and it makes a very pleasant home. It commands a view of the Potomac, Arlington and the Virginia hills, and a cool wind from the south blows through it day and night. Mrs. Southworth began her writing at Washington, and her first story was published in The National Era. She writes the same character of stories to-day that she did then. They are full of blood and thunder and of love and longing. She turns them out as though she were a machine, and is not dependent at all upon her moods. She grinds out everything with her own hands, writing boldly with a large gold pen. She revises her proofs herself, and often works far into the night. She writes generally from Tuesday until Thursday night, and spends Friday and Saturday in visiting, while on Monday she revises her proofs. She is a close reader of the newspapers, and, like Charles Reade, she takes a great many of her stories from the facts she finds in them.

Another woman writer of Washington is Mrs. Admiral Dahlgren, who owns one of the best houses of the capital city. She lives just across from Gen. Bob Schenck, her former minister to England, and a little in front of the house of Senator Conger, of Michigan. She has written a book about South mountain, her country home near here, giving a collection of weird stories and legends of the romantic region in which it is located. Mrs. Dahlgren is the widow of Admiral Dahlgren. She is an Ohio girl, and her father was, I think, a member of congress. She is posted on society matters, and is an authority on Washington etiquette, about which she has written a book.

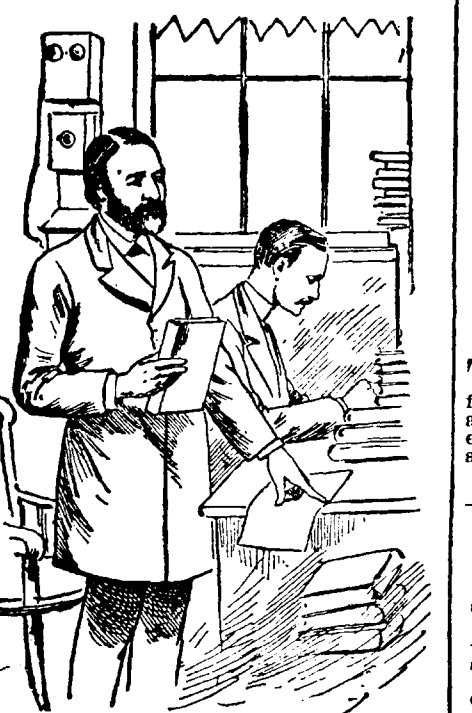

One of the queerest literary characters of Washington is Joaquin Miller, who owns a log cabin on one of the hills above the city. Mr. Miller cultivates the wild eccentricities of western life, and I have thought at times that he affects a good many of these for the advertisement it gives him. He goes about Washington in a slouch hat, with his pants hanging in his boots, and his long red hair flowing down upon his brawny shoulders. As you talk to him, a dreamy, far-off look will come into his eyes, and he will make the most outlandish statements, spiced with poetry, in regard to matters in the conversation. He used to gallop about Washington on horseback, scaring the children, in the costume of a western cowboy, and a part of his attire was a pair of pantaloons made of the furred skin of the Angora goat. He had a silver pommet to his saddle as big as a soap dish and his stirrups were as big as a half-peck measure. Miller has received a good deal of money from his writing, but he spends a great deal, and I doubt whether he owns much more than the little property that he has here. The interior of his cabin here is as queer as the outside. The walls are made of wood logs and chinked with plaster, and Mr. Miller keeps his papers by tacking them to the walls with pins. He has a couch under the window, and there is a bed covered with skins behind a portiere made of rich oriental cloths. Joaquin writes on a pine table, which probably cost about $1, and the unpainted poplar chair he sits upon could be bought anywhere for fifty cents. There is no cloth upon the table, and a plain inkstand and a steel pen are his only materials. He has no system in his writing, and can only write when the humor seizes him. His penmanship is hardly to read than the hieroglyphics of the obelisks, and he cannot write at all if there is any other person present than himself. He once told me that the presence of a child constrained his hand, and that he has found himself posing before every girl he talked to. "I must be alone," he said, "to do good work, and I cannot dictate satisfactorily." Joaquin Miller began writing by sending letters to a weekly newspaper in Oregon. The first pay he got for literary work was $50 for a magazine article to The Overland Monthly, and he considers his best work the novel he wrote, called "One Fair Woman."

One queer thing about Miller is that he never allows telegram boys to deliver messages to him at his cabin, and he frightened one nearly to death not long ago by threatening to shoot if he came inside the gate. Mr. Ainsworth Spofford, the librarian of congress, is a book maker as well as a book lender. He is a dark faced man with a frame made of wire and filled with activity. Between 50 and 60 years of age he does more work than any young man of 25 in Washington, and he never wastes an idle moment. He understands how to make other men work for him, and he can dictate as smoothly as he writes. He has a brusque way of talking and a rather rough voice, but he is business from the start, and he allows no one from time foolishly. He is always ready, however, to give information, and that little dark head of his seems to have packed away in its cells the whole contents of the congressional library. Tell him what you want to know of a subject. He will put his finger upon an electric bell, give a word to one of his assistants, and in a moment you have before you the very material you want. Mr. Spofford owns a very pleasant home on Massachusetts avenue in the most fashionable part of Washington. It is a wide, red brick, and is worth I should say at least $15,000. He rides to this every evening in the hot Harrier. He always carries a green bag with him out of which he pulls a book as soon as he enters and reads all the way to and from the Capitol. Mr. Spofford's work shop, however, is in the congressional library. His little alcove behind the librarian's desk is always filled with books and papers, arranged in the most systematic order, and Mr. Spofford generally has an assistant by his side whom he is using as a machine to carry on the labor upon which his mind is engaged.

Mr. Spofford and George Bancroft are great friends, and take regular horseback rides into the country together. Every Sunday afternoon you may see them trotting out of Washington at a good round pace, and it is hours before they return.

Speaking of Bancroft, he is still a worker, and at 86 he grinds away as many hours daily as he did when he was secretary of the navy under President Polk. He sleeps in his library, and has a little single bed there with a table standing beside it upon which are two candlesticks. If a thought occurs to him in the night he jots it down. He rises early and has his breakfast about 8 o'clock, which is always a light one. He works then on until about 1, when he takes a lunch. Shortly after this he goes out to ride on horseback or drive and he can ride thirty miles without tiring his old, sinewy frame. He shows the signs of age, however, in his hair and beard, which are as white as slacked lime, and in the many wrinkles which show upon his parchment-like face. He uses a stenographer in his work and polishes and republishes. It is his habit first to dictate his thoughts to his secretary, who takes them down in shorthand, goes off to the other room of the library and writes them out on the type writer. Mr. Bancroft revises this and the revision is again printed. He corrects and recorrects until he has it polished to suit his taste. He considers 250 words a good day's work, and how small an amount this is will be seen when I tell you that it makes only about one page of an octavo volume, or about one-fifth of a column of a newspaper. Bancroft's library is on the second floor of his house. It comprises three large rooms, and Bancroft works in a room about 1, I should say its walls have double rows of books on each of them, and he has more than 15,000 volumes in the library. He has made it a principle to buy every book that he could find upon his hobby of United States history, and he has hundreds of valuable manuscripts, which have cost him a great deal. While he was minister to England he made extracts from the public archives of England and France, and the documents of this collection comprise more than 300 volumes. His books are in all languages, and he reads and talks the German and French like the English. He considers his history finished as far as it can be, and his great reputation has been made by laying out a great mission for himself early in life, and sticking to it throughout his career.

FRANK GEORGE CARPENTER.

The Poor Little Ones.

We often see children with red eruptions on face and hands, rough, scaly skin and often sores on the head. These things indicate a depraved condition of the blood. In the growing period, children have need of pure blood by which to build up strong and healthy bodies. If Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is given, the blood is purged of its bad elements, and the child's development will be healthy, and as it should be. Scrofulous affections, rickets, fever-sores, hip-joint disease or other grave maladies and sufferings are sure to result from neglect and lack of proper attention to such cases.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.

Care for the Children

Children feel the debility of the changing seasons, even more than adults, and they become cross, peevish, and uncontrollable. The blood should be cleansed and the system invigorated by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last Spring my two children were vaccinated. Soon after, they broke all out with running sores, so dreadful I thought I should lose them. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured them completely, and they have been healthy ever since. I do feel that Hood's Sarsaparilla saved my children to me." Mrs. C. L. THOMPSON, West Warren, Mass.

Purify the Blood

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the prices of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

It is said that he does this to punish the English bondholders of the Wabash, who, he alleges, have treated him shabbily in his plans for reorganizing the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific road.

HISTORIC BATTLES.

Fallen Timber and Fort Meigs Victories Recalled.

Dr. B. S. Woodworth this morning received an invitation to be present at the celebration of the anniversaries of the battles of Fallen Timber and Fort Meigs. Ninety-two years ago, Mad Anthony Wayne, met, fought and conquered the warriors of the allied Indian nations under their intrepid leader Turkey Foot, at the battle field of Fallen Timber. This heroic field is on the northwest bank of the Maumee, two miles above Fort Meigs. Seventy-three years ago the American soldiers at Fort Meigs, under William Henry Harrison, withstood two different assaults of a largely superior force of British and Indian soldiers, and compelled them to withdraw from the Maumee valley, and seek safety on Canadian soil.

The annual commemoration of these historic events will be held on the Fallen Timber battle ground, August 20, 1886, under the auspices of the Maumee Valley Pioneer association, and the Maumee Valley Monumental association. Gen. W. H. Gibson and Judge Robert Lowry are promised to deliver orations.

CHOICE BITS.

The News That is Culled for the "Sentinel" Readers.

A. S. Case, of Lagrange, while sneezing last Friday night, swallowed his false teeth. They were soon dragged out, however, and fatal results averted.

Logansport is stirred up over a fight between the mayor and prosecuting attorney, the former refusing to credit the latter with a fee in cases where he is not present, and the defendant pleads guilty.

Secretary Heron, of the state board of agriculture, takes a rosy view of the crop outlook, based upon numerous reports from all parts of the state. "We have at least 35,000,000—against 31,000,000 last year, and the beauty of it is that the most of the wheat is of excellent quality. And, as for corn, it never looked better."

Lea W. Munhall, the evangelist, who has been at work on the Pacific coast the past year, has returned to Indianapolis for a short season of rest. He reports having had a very successful series of meetings. On this trip he was accompanied by his family. It is Mr. Munhall's intention to take up his residence in Philadelphia, expecting to devote his future to labors in the east.

The Indianapolis News says that a universal well reaches the state health board office to the effect that the doctors are threatened with starvation. There is comparatively no sickness in the state. The usual summer diseases have not developed, and as for that long promised outbreak of cholera it has been postponed another year. Children's diseases have not been numerous reported, and up to date the ratio of fatalities, compared with various years, is light.

HOT CORN FOR FOWLS.

A correspondent writes: "If you want to make your fowls feel good and thankful give them hot corn for supper—just as hot as they can eat it. To find out how hot it should be pick up a handful and hold it tightly in your closed hand; if it burns, of course it is too hot, but if after holding it a minute it makes your hand feel warm and nice it is just right. To heat the corn put it in an iron pan or kettle in the stove oven and stir it occasionally. If your wife has biscuit in the oven you better put the kettle on the back part of the stove and stir the corn often. Mind now, I don't mean that you are to put water in with the corn; I mean hot, dry corn. If some kernels at the bottom of the kettle should get scorched, or even charred, the hens will eat it, and it will do them good, too."

Regret that many of their patrons did not receive as much attention on Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, as they wished, but it was impossible to do better with such a multitude to wait upon. Several salesmen were absent on vacation, but we have arranged to have the full staff on hand for the balance of this week and everyone can have prompt attention during the remainder of the sale.

BILL HALEY.

There is Still a Determination to Lynch Him.

The excitement attending the attempted lynching of Bill Haley at Paulding Thursday night does not abate with time, and the citizens expect a revisitation nightly. The prevailing sentiment is that Haley must hang, and from all appearances the execution will be performed by citizens of Paulding county at large. The strictest secrecy as to Haley and his whereabouts is enforced, and outside of one or two officials nothing is known as to him. The jail is closed against any and all visitors, making much speculation. By some it was thought he was not a mile from the jail Thursday night, and that he is now back. Others believe him to have been taken to Van Wert or Lima, but when no one knows, neither has any member of the mob been recognized.

Ike Wilcox was fined $10 and costs, $25 in all, for selling liquor after 11 o'clock.

The warm weather often has a depressing and debilitating effect. Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes all languor and lassitude.

THE ANARCHISTS.

The Leading State Witness on the Stand.

Chicago, July 21.—In the anarchist trial to-day, William Selliger, who is regarded as a principal witness for the state, was put on the witness stand. The court room was crowded. Selliger testified he lived on Sedgewick street; had as a boarder Louis Lingg, a defendant; on Monday night the witness attended a meeting of the carpenters' union at Zepf's hall.

"After the revenge circular was distributed, did you go to work Tuesday?"

"No."

"What did you do that morning?"

"I got up at 7:30 a. m., when Lingg came. I had previously told him that I wanted those bombs removed from my house. He told me to work diligently at them and they would be taken away that day. I took some coffee and after awhile I worked at some bad shells, filling the holes."

"Look at the shells I show you (handing witness a leaden sphere about the size of a small turnip). Did you work at these shells?"

"Yes."

"What did you do?"

"I drilled the holes. It took me about half an hour."

"Where was Lingg at a meeting?"

"On the west side. He came back about one o'clock."

"Did you speak to him?"

"He said I did not work very much, I should have done more."

"I told him I had no pleasure in the work. Then he said 'we will work harder this afternoon.'"

The witness described how he, Lingg, Huebner, Monzenberg and Newman all worked at the bomb and gas pipe machines.

On Tuesday evening Lingg said the bombs should be ready that night as they were to be used then. They were filled with dynamite and provided with caps and put in a trunk and carried by witness Lingg and Wuzenberg to Lept's hall on Clybourn avenue.

The box was opened at Nept's and several people took bombs. Lingg, Thilen, Gustav, Lehman and two others were with the witness, going to the north side, where it had been arranged to have a meeting. Lingg wanted to throw a bomb into a patrol wagon on the way, but the witness prevented him.

When he went home he heard of the Haymarket affair and hid the bombs under the sidewalk. The witness often heard Engle say every working man should make bombs.

On cross-examination the witness said he had been made no promises by the state's attorney or officials, who simply told him he had better tell the truth. He did not know his testimony or statements would prevent his being tried for murder. The cross-examination was severe and searching, but the witness' testimony remained unshaken.

The Bill Against the Wabash Heard.

CHICAGO, July 21.—The bill in equity brought by Charles H. Boers against the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific railway and the receivers, asking the appointment of a special receiver for the Chicago division, was considered by Judge Graham, of the United States circuit court yesterday. Judge Graham expressed in strong terms his disapprobation of the appointment of receivers remote from the property to be conserved. The bondholders asked the court to have a special receiver appointed to take evidence as to the present management of the property, with a view of having a special receiver appointed for the Chicago division. The court took the matter under advisement.

DEATH'S CRASH.

Seven Persons Lose Their Lives Near Columbia, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, July 21.—News of a most terrible collision near Columbia, Tenn., on the Louisville and Nashville road has just reached here.

The collision occurred in a deep cut, with a sharp curve making it impossible to see each other; hence the collision took place while both trains were running at full speed. Both engines are a total wreck. The following is a list of the killed:

Henry Lanman and Robert Brown, engineer and fireman of the accommodation train.

Thad Beech and Pat King, engineer and fireman of Engine No. 519.

Monroe Wilson, baggage master.

Al. B. Robertson, of Louisville, Ky., passenger agent, formerly ticket agent of the Louisville and Nashville road at this point, who was riding on the engine.

Section Foreman Thomason, of the Nashville and Florence railroad, who was riding on engine 519.

There were only two passengers injured—the Rev. William H. Green, who was in the smoking car, and was thrown against a seat, cutting a gash over his right eye, not serious. The other a colored girl, name unknown, was slightly wounded.

The sight of the bodies is most horrible, they being torn to pieces and scalded by the escaping steam. It will probably be late to-morrow before the wreck is cleared.

A FEAST OF SONG.

Opening of the North American Songsterfest.

MILWAUKEE, July 21.—Delightful weather marks the opening day of the twenty-fourth festival of the North American Songsterbund. The city is full of strangers and trains are arriving hourly with large additions. It is estimated that between 10,000 and 12,000 people will arrive from Chicago and St. Louis to-day. Decorations are general and elaborate, the principal ones being on business streets where every merchant and shop owner vies with his neighbor in making his store attractive. From every flag staff in the city a flag flies, many foreign standards being displayed as well as the stars and stripes.

Shot by Horse Thieves.

St. Louis, July 21.—A special from Little Rock, Arkansas, to the Post Dispatch, says: "James O. Cook and Frederick Gerhart, living in Montgomery county, were shot and killed by horse thieves last Monday night, who were in the act of stealing the farmers' horses. The thieves, seven in number, escaped."

More Riots at Marseilles.

LONDON, July 21.—The royalist rioting at Marseilles continued yesterday and last night. The militia at midnight charged on the mob, capturing 200 rioters and turned them over to the police. Ten persons were wounded.

For any number of years, while Judge Davis was on the Supreme bench, and in the Senate, his daily luncheon consisted of two apples, a ginger cookie and a glass of milk, which cost him never more than ten cents, and were always eaten precisely at the same hour, standing before the counter of an old woman called "Dyspepsia Mary," who for years years sold pies and cakes in the Senate corridor. She always selected the best apples in her basket for him and laid them carefully to one side; and he got a larger allowance of milk than the other customers, a mug being kept for his special use.

HOW GREELEY CAME TO BE NOMINATED.

"Did you know," said a New York member of Congress this morning, "that the nomination of Horace Greeley for the Presidency in 1872 was the result of a blunder, and that those who were surprised the most were the very people who had done the most to bring it about? It is an interesting story. If you remember, it required great effort on the part of Lyman Trumbull, Carl Schurz, and the other friends of the Liberal movement to enlist Mr. Greeley's sympathies in the cause. When he did so, however, we Democrats felt that we had secured a powerful ally, and our hearts warmed, as it were, to our old enemy of the Tribune. Shortly after this the Democratic Liberal Convention was held at Cincinnati. The New York delegation was not pledged to any candidate, but the prevailing sentiment was that David Davis, of Illinois, would be the most acceptable man to pit against Gen. Grant. Mr. Davis was very popular with the moneyed classes of the East. He was a man of high character and broad attainments, and we believed his candidacy would give us a good fighting chance of securing the electoral vote of Illinois. But we felt very grateful to Mr. Greeley. We decided, therefore, that we would give him a complimentary vote in the convention as an expression of our kindly regard. We went out to Cincinnati in a special train, with drums beating and flags flying, seventy-two delegates, and probably 200 others who had no business there, but wanted to see the fun. As soon as we arrived we began talking Greeley. This was done for a lark, you must remember, but we talked about him so much that we soon started a great boom for him. We concluded, however, that this would do us no harm, and that, at the proper moment, he could be quietly set aside, when we would bend our energies, first to the nomination of David Davis, or failing in that, the nomination of Charles Francis Adams. The Kentucky delegation was headed by Cassius M. Clay. They had no candidate, but they had heard so much talk about Horace Greeley around New York headquarters that they believed we were honestly in favor of the old man, and, to our horror, when that State was called, what did Clay do but announce that Kentucky had cast her twenty-six votes for Horace Greeley. As we had pledged our first vote to Mr. Greeley we were bound to make good the promise, and when New York's seventy-two votes followed Kentucky's twenty-six, the convention became wild with excitement, and from that time until the roll call was finished nothing could be heard but shouts for Greeley. We attempted to check the tide on the next ballot, but it was too late. Greeley was nominated on the second ballot, and the maddest set of men in Cincinnati that night were the members of the New York delegation, whose choice was David Davis, of Illinois.—Washington letter.

THE DOCTOR WAS RIGHT.

A Boston physician was called out of a sound slumber one night to answer the telephone. "Hello! what is it?" he asked, little pleased at the idea of leaving his comfortable bed. "Baby is crying, doctor, what shall I do?" came across the wire. "Oh! perhaps it's a pin," suggested the doctor, recognizing the voice of a young mother, one of his patients. "No," was the reply; "I'm sure it can't be that." "Perhaps he has the colic," returned the doctor, with well simulated solicitude. "No, I don't think so," replied the anxious mother; "he doesn't act that way." "Then perhaps he's hungry," said the doctor, as a last resort. "Oh, I'll see," came across the wires, and then all was still. The doctor went back to bed and was soon asleep again. About half an hour afterwards he was again awakened by the violent ringing of the telephone bell. Jumping out of bed and placing the receiver to his ear, he was cheered by the following message: "You are right, doctor; baby was hungry."

A college paper recently criticised very severely the students who act as waiters in the summer hotels. It thinks the practice is unworthy of young men who expect to occupy an honorable position in the world. This, says the Boston Journal, depends upon the motive. If a needy collegian, who is anxious to earn money to secure an education, gains a few dollars as a waiter in a summer hotel it can not be regarded as an unworthy act. We sat opposite to a gentleman at a White Mountain hotel last summer, who holds an honorable and responsible position, who did not think it reflected upon his manhood to state that he was once a waiter in the same hotel where he was then a guest.

HOOSIER DEMOCRATS.

They Will Nominate a Winning Ticket August 11.—The Outlook Good.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 21.—The democratic state central committee, at its meeting held here yesterday, decided that the state convention should be held Wednesday, August 11.

There were present the following members of the state committee:

Ed Henderson, fifth district, chairman; J. L. Rice, third district, secretary; First district, W. B. McDonald; Second district, H. V. Norval; Third district, Joseph L. Riley; Fourth district, O. Ewing, jr.; Fifth district, Ed Henderson; Sixth district, L. P. Gray; Seventh district, Jackson Landers; Eighth district, Dr. W. H. Gillum; Ninth district, Elwood Avery; Tenth district, John O. Odell, elected in place of A. P. Crampton, resigned; Eleventh district, D. B. Sweetzer; Twelfth district, Eli B. Gerber; Thirteenth district, John C. Wagner. The following members of the executive committee were also present: Joseph E. McDonald and James H. Rice. Francis T. Hord was elected a member in the place of Edward Hawkins, resigned, and W. J. Craig in place of C. A. Zollinger, resigned.

The trouble arising from congressional fights was discussed at some length by prominent members of the party at a general meeting before the state committee assembled. The state committee, after considering the question for nearly three hours decided that it had no power to interfere in congressional fights, but adopted a resolution asking the state convention to give it the requisite authority.

It was practically agreed before the meeting was called at 2 o'clock, that August 11 would be the proper day for the convention to meet. The representation will be one delegate to every 200 votes cast for Governor Gray, giving a convention of 1,225 delegates, with 44 votes from Allen county.

All the politicians drawn hither by the opportunity afforded by the meeting for consultation avow a belief that the democracy will sweep the state. Chairman Henderson says: "Our chances for victory are excellent. We are harmonious and enthusiastic. The troubles in the congressional districts do not effect the state organization. There is no more local trouble now than there was two years ago, and then we gained forty-five majority in the legislature. We will carry the legislature this year, without doubt."

"Who will be your senator?"

"Why, the nominee of the unions, of course. There are several gentlemen who are said to be candidates, including Senator McDonald, Governor Gray and probably Congressman Holman."

Among the candidates in town are J. B. McCullough, of Princeton (Monroe's opponent); Senator McMullen, of Dearborn, candidate for attorney general; Charlie Munson, Allen county's candidate for auditor of state; Judge James Brannan, candidate for congress in the eleventh district; John Pearey, candidate for state treasurer from Putnam county; Dr. A. B. Pitzer, of Tipton, who wants to be auditor of state; Will P. Hawk, of Jay county, candidate for clerk of the supreme court, and Tom Byrnes, of Vanderburg, candidate candidate for treasurer of state.

Senator McMullen thinks the democracy can not lose the state ticket, "and even if it does," he said to-day, pointing to a map of the late gerrymander, "even if we do lose the state by 10,000 majority, we will carry the legislature." He says that Holman will certainly be a candidate for senatorial honors. McDonald and Gray are also in the field and all are, he thinks, formidable.

Chairman Henderson says that there will be no reorganization until after the meeting of the state convention, at which time the various delegations from the respective congressional districts will select committeemen. When reorganization occurs the probabilities now seem to be that the present officers will be continued.

REPUBLICANS.

They Misrepresent the Democracy Party and Formulate a Policy.

New York, July 22.—Albert Griffin, chairman of the organizing committee of the anti-saloon republicans, has issued a call for a conference, to be held in Chicago, September 16th. It says: "Each state is requested to elect four times as many delegates and alternates as it has senators and representatives in congress, and territories can send as many as they would be entitled to if they were states."

The promoters of this movement, the call says, believe that as the democratic party has become the protector of the saloon interests, the republican party ought, as a matter of right, become the avowed defender of the home against the saloon. It is not intended to ask the party to commit itself nationally to or against any specified law, but to announce as its settled policy that it will everywhere strive to reduce the business of dram selling and the evils resulting from it, as much as possible. Each state is to decide for itself from time to time, what laws are best adapted to secure the end in view.

The call further says that more than one-half of the republican members of the senate and a large number of the congressmen and party leaders have expressed themselves in favor of this policy. During the past two months arrangements have been made to insure delegations from nine states, to-wit: Kansas, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, Vermont, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine and Rhode Island, and it is hoped that all the northern and some of the southern states will be represented.

WATERING STOCK.

The C. H. and D. Officials say the Idea is Absurd.

CINCINNATI, July 21.—Since the change in the management of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad, there have been frequent assertions that stock is to be watered, and that Vice-President Waite, general manager for the past four years, is to be displaced. Concerning these rumors, President Stainer and Vice-President Ives, who are now here, say denial cannot be made too strong in regard to General Manager Waite. He will be retained. As to watering stock they declared that absurd. They had fully examined the condition and value of the road and had no intention of doing anything but to let it earn to its full capacity and to continue its present management. They are satisfied with their investment and wondered that Cincinnati holders consented to part with it.

It was announced that the Thomas Paine Society of Frederick County, Maryland, would celebrate the seventy-ninth anniversary of Tom Paine's death at the home of Aaron Davis, near Frederick; but not a celebrator appeared. Mr. Davis himself observed the day by not working. He said that, while there were only about a dozen members of the society, there were three or four hundred believers of the Paine doctrines in the country, but fear of social ostracism or injury to their business caused them to make a secret of their views.

It is an extraordinary fact that those who get to high words generally use low language.

WASHINGTON.

Congress will Adjourn July 28. Washington, July 21.—Mr. Morrison's concurrent resolution was reported from the ways and means committee providing for an adjournment of congress July 28 and was passed by a vote of 145 to thirty-six.

Senator Hoar, from the committee on judiciary, to-day reported favorably a bill to repeal the tenure of the office act. The repeal is not, however, to affect any officer heretofore suspended under the provisions of said sections or any designation, nomination, or appointment heretofore made by virtue of the provisions thereof.

The United States Senate passed the oleomargarine bill, but considerably amended as it came from the house. The tax is reduced from five to two cents. A conference committee will endeavor to settle the differences between the two houses.

The senate then resumed consideration of the Payne case.

To thwart them he procured a license and was married by David Judd. He presented a certificate from the girl to obtain the license that she was twenty-seven years of age. The official who gave the license suspected something wrong and sent a messenger to recall it, but he reached the place just after the marriage ceremony had been performed.

LITERARY WORKSHOPS

OF WASHINGTON AND THE HABITS OF THEIR OWNERS.

Frances Hodgson Burnett, Emma Southworth, and Mrs. Admiral Dahlgren—Joquin Miller's Eccentricities. Librarian Spofford's Activity.

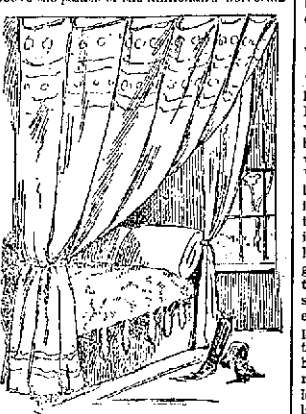

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Washington has become one of the great literary centers of the United States, and it has turned out some of the most notable books and book writers in the country. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was written by Harriet Beecher Stowe for a Washington paper. Mark Twain, pen-name of Samuel Clemens, wrote "The Innocents Abroad" by the heat of a steam iron stove while he was a Washington correspondent, and Constance Fenimore Woolson was living in modest rooms on New York avenue at the capital when she wrote "Auntie," the novel which gave her her greatest reputation. The copy for this book was bundled up for her by a congressman, who was a friend of mine, and he told me he sent it off to Harper's in a shoe box, expecting it to come out in book form. The Harpers used it as a serial for their magazine, and upon its conclusion published it as a book. It was here that Walt Whitman wrote "The Leaves of Grass," and Mary Halleck Foote, the authoress of some of the best novels lately published, is a sister of Senator Hawley's wife, and she spends many of her winters in Washington.

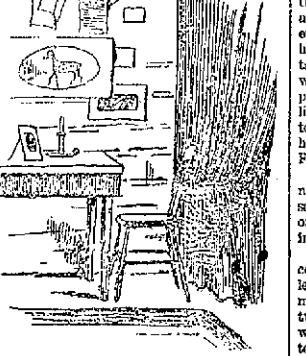

MRS. BURNETT'S HOME.

Tom Benton wrote his "Thirty years in the United States Senate" in an old, brown, stucco house of two stories on G street, and it was in this house that he penned his abridgement of "The Debates of Congress." James G. Blaine wrote the first volume of his "Twenty Years in Congress" in three different houses of Washington. He began it while he was living next to Gen. Beale, and just above the house where Mrs. Sickles used to live with Burton Key. He continued it in his great mansion on Dupont's circle, which he now rents to a Chicago millionaire for $18,000 a year, and he completed it in Senator Windom's big brick, just across from where Secretary Endicott lives, and facing Scott's circle. Sam Cox wrote his "Three Decades of Federal Legislation" in his pretty green stone house on Dupont circle, which he sold for $20,000 cash before he left for Turkey, and George Bancroft has written a great part of his historical work in his roomy brick residence, which looks out upon H street, just above the palace of the millionaire Corcoran.

JOAQUIN MILLER'S CABIN.

There is a great deal of literary work being done here all the time, and in this letter I will take you into a few of the literary workshops, and show you how some writers live and work. Frances Hodgson Burnett has a pretty house on I street, just below the house in which Gen. Garfield lived while he was a member of congress. Her home is a three-story red brick, and its interior, though not large, is furnished with aesthetic taste. Curious furniture, odd weapons and pretty bric-a-brac are seen everywhere, and Mrs. Burnett seems to have a passion for old oriental rugs, for she has them of every size, and uses them both on the floor and on her sofas. She does her literary work in the attic, where she has a room which she calls her den. She writes easily, is not particular about penmanship, and often jots down her ideas on odd scraps of paper. Mrs. Burnett is a rather pretty blonde, and her years are, I suppose, under the forties. She is of medium height, has dark auburn hair, a broad forehead and pleasant blue eyes. She told me once she could not remember the time that she began writing, and that her first story, entitled "Miss Caruthers' Engagement," she wrote when she was 15. She received $20 for this from Mrs. Godoy, of the July's Book, and soon furnished them another, for which she got $25. After a time she became acquainted with Peterson, of Peterson's Magazine, and it was only a few years ago that she got into "The Century." Her books now sell as well as those of any novelist of to-day, and her inducements to write have been so great that she overworked herself about two years ago, and has not been very well since. She wrote the story which is now coming out in St. Nicholas under the title of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" two years ago, and has done but little since then. Mrs. Burnett is married, and her husband is a black-eyed doctor who looks like an artist, and who is said to have considerable artistic taste. She has two very pretty blonde-haired little boys, and her home is a happy one.

THE TABLE WHERE MILLER WORKS.

PROSPECT COTTAGE, MRS. SOUTHWORTH'S HOME.

Mrs. Emma D. E. N. Southworth is another Washington novelist, and she is perhaps the most prolific writer in the country. She is 66 years old, and has written a novel for every year of her life. All of her work is taken by Robert Bonner, of The Ledger, and she has not furnished a page of manuscript to any other publisher for years. It is said that Bonner pays her $10,000 a year for everything that she writes, but I have no basis for this statement except rumor. There is no doubt but that she is well paid, and the cottage which she owns here on the Georgetown Heights, though it lacks paint, is covered with vines, and it makes a very pleasant home. It commands a view of the Potomac, Arlington and the Virginia hills, and a cool wind from the south blows through it day and night. Mrs. Southworth began her writing at Washington, and her first story was published in The National Era. She writes the same character of stories to-day that she did then. They are full of blood and thunder and of love and longing. She turns them out as though she were a machine, and is not dependent at all upon her moods. She grinds out everything with her own hands, writing boldly with a large gold pen. She revises her proofs herself, and often works far into the night. She writes generally from Tuesday until Thursday night, and spends Friday and Saturday in visiting, while on Monday she revises her proofs. She is a close reader of the newspapers, and, like Charles Reade, she takes a great many of her stories from the facts she finds in them.

Another woman writer of Washington is Mrs. Admiral Dahlgren, who owns one of the best houses of the capital city. She lives just across from Gen. Ben Schenck, our former minister to England, and a little in front of the house of Senator Canizer, of Michigan. She has written a book about South Mountain, her country home, near here, giving a collection of weird stories and legends of the romantic region in which it is located. Mrs. Dahlgren is the widow of Admiral Dahlgren. She is an Ohio girl, and her father was, I think, a member of congress. She is posted on society matters, and is an authority on Washington etiquette, about which she has written a book.

One of the queerest literary characters of Washington is Joquin Miller, who owns a log cabin on one of the hills above the city. Mr. Miller cultivates the wild eccentricities of western life, and I have thought at times that he affects a good many of these for the advertisement it gives him. He goes about Washington in a slouch hat, with his pantaloons in his boots and his long red hair flowing down upon his brawny shoulders. As you talk to him, a dreamy, far-off look will come into his eyes, and he will make the most outlandish statements, spiced with poetry. In regard to matters in the conversation, he is used to gallop about Washington on horseback, wearing the children, in the costume of a western cowboy, and a part of his attire was a pair of pantaloons made of the furred skin of the Angora goat. He had a silver pompadour to his saddle as big as a soap dish and his stirrups were as big as a half-peck measure. Miller has received a good deal of money from his writing, but he spends a great deal, and I doubt whether he owns much more than the little property that he has here. The interior of his cabin here is as queer as the outside. The walls are made of wood logs and chinked with plaster, and Mr. Miller keeps his papers by tacking them to the walls with pins. He has a couch under the window, and there is a bed covered with skins behind a portiere made of rich oriental cloth. Joquin writes on a pine table, which probably cost about $1, and the unpainted paper chair he sits upon could be bought anywhere for fifty cents. There is no cloth upon the table, and a plain tin stand and a steel pen are his only materials. He has no system in his writing, and can only write when the humor seizes him. His penmanship is hurried to read than the hieroglyphics of the obelisks, and he cannot write at all if there is any other person present than himself. He once told me that the presence of a child constrained his hand, and that he has found himself posing before every girl he talked to. "I must be alone," he said, "to do good work, and I cannot dictate satisfactorily." Joquin Miller began writing by sending letters to a weekly newspaper in Oregon. The first pay he got for literary work was $50 for a magazine article to The Overland Monthly, and he considers his best work the novel he wrote, called "One Fair Woman."

One queer thing about Miller is that he never allows telegram boys to deliver messages to him at his cabin, and he frightened one nearly to death not long ago by threatening to shoot if he came inside the gate. Mr. Ainsworth Spofford, the librarian of congress, is a book mender as well as a book lender. He is a dark faced man with a frame made of wire and filled with activity. Between 60 and 65 years of age he does more work than any young man of 25 in Washington, and he never wastes an idle moment. He understands how to make other men work for him, and he can dictate as smoothly as he writes. He has a brusque way of talking and a rather rough voice, but he is business from the start, and he allows no one from messenger to senator to consume his valuable time foolishly. He is always ready, however, to give information, and that little dark head of his seems to have packed away in its cells the whole contents of the congressional library. Tell him what you want to know of a subject. He will put his finger upon an electric bell, give a word to one of his assistants, and in a moment you have before you the very material you want. Mr. Spofford owns a very pleasant home on Massachusetts avenue in the most fashionable part of Washington. It is a wide, red brick, and is worth I should say at least $15,000. He rises to this every evening in the red. He always carries a green bag with him, and he pulls a book as soon as he enters and reads all the way to and from the Capitol. Mr. Spofford's workshop, however, is in the congressional library. His little alcove behind the librarian's desk is always filled with books and papers, arranged in the most systematic order, and Mr. Spofford generally has an assistant by his side whom he is using as a machine to carry on the labor upon which his mind is engaged.

Mr. Spofford and George Bancroft are great friends, and they take regular horse-back rides into the country together. Every Sunday afternoon you may see them trotting out of Washington at a good round pace, and it is hours before they return.

Speaking of Bancroft, he is still a worker, and at 86 he grinds away as many hours daily as he did when he was secretary of the navy under President Polk. He sleeps in his library, and has a little single bed there with a table standing beside it upon which are two candlesticks. If a thought occurs to him in the night he jots it down. He rises early and he has his breakfast about 8 o'clock, which is always a light one. He works then on until about 1, when he takes a lunch. Shortly after this he goes out to ride on horseback or drive and he can ride thirty miles without tiring his old, slender frame. He shows the signs of age, however, in his hair and beard, which are as white as slacked lime, and in the many wrinkles which show upon his parchment-like face. He uses a stenographer in his work and polishes and re-polishes. It is his habit first to dictate his thoughts to his secretary, who takes them down in shorthand, goes off to the other room of the library and writes them out on the type writer. Mr. Bancroft revises this and the revision is again printed. He corrects and corrects until he has it polished to suit his taste. He considers 500 words a good day's work, and how small an amount this is will be seen when I tell you that it makes only about one page of an octavo volume, or about one-fifth of a column of a newspaper. Bancroft's library is on the second floor of his house. It comprises three large rooms, and Bancroft works in a room about I should say at a guess, 20 by 30. The shelves which line its walls have done more of books on each of these and he has more than 15,000 volumes in the library. He has made it a principle to buy every book that he could find upon his hobby of United States history, and he has hundreds of valuable manuscripts, which

FRANK GEORGE CARPENTER.

The Poor Little Ones.

We often see children with red eruptions on face and hands, rough, scaly skin and often sores on the head. These things indicate a depraved condition of the blood. In the growing period, children have need of pure blood by which to build up strong and healthy bodies. If Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is given, the blood is purged of its bad elements, and the child's development will be healthy, and as it should be. Scrofulous affections, rickets, fever-sores, hip-joint disease or other grave maladies and sufferings are sure to result from neglect and lack of proper attention to such cases.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

All Sorts of hurts and many sorts of ails of man and beast need a cooling lotion. Mustang Liniment.

Care for the Children

Children feel the debility of the changing seasons, even more than adults, and they become cross, peevish, and uncontrollable. The blood should be cleansed and the system invigorated by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last Spring my two children were vaccinated. Soon after, they broke all out with running sores, so dreadful I thought I should lose them. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured them completely, and they have been healthy ever since. I do feel that Hood's Sarsaparilla saved my children to me." Mrs. C. L. THOMPSON, West Warren, Mass.

Purify the Blood

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of red-ant agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. HOSKINS, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." J. B. BARKINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

HISTORIC BATTLES.

Fallen Timber and Fort Meigs Victories Recalled.

Dr. B. S. Woodworth this morning received an invitation to be present at the celebration of the anniversaries of the battles of Fallen Timber and Fort Meigs.

Ninety-two years ago, Mad Anthony Wayne, met, fought and conquered the warriors of the allied Indian nations under their intrepid leader Turkey Foot, at the battle field of Fallen Timber. This heroic field is on the northwest bank of the Maumee, two miles above Fort Meigs. Seventy-three years ago the American soldiers at Fort Meigs, under William Henry Harrison, withstood two different assaults of a largely superior force of British and Indian soldiers, and compelled them to withdraw from the Maumee valley, and seek safety on Canadian soil.

The annual commemoration of these historic events will be held on the Fallen Timber battle ground, August 20, 1886, under the auspices of the Maumee Valley Pioneer association, and the Maumee Valley Monumental association. Gen. W. H. Gibson and Judge Robert Lowry are promised to deliver orations.

The News That is Culled for the "Sentinel" Readers.

A. S. Case, of Lagrange, while sneezing last Friday night, swallowed his false teeth. They were soon dragged out, however, and fatal results averted.

Logansport is stirred up over a fight between the mayor and prosecuting attorney, the former refusing to credit the latter with a fee in cases where he is not present, and the defendant pleads guilty.

Secretary Heron, of the state board of agriculture, takes a rosy view of the crop outlook, based upon numerous reports from all parts of the state. "We have at least $5,000,000—against $1,000,000 last year, and the beauty of it is that the most of the wheat is of excellent quality. And, as for corn, it never looked better."

Lea W. Munhall, the evangelist, who has been at work on the Pacific coast the past year, has returned to Indianapolis for a short season of rest. He reports having had a very successful series of meetings. On this trip he was accompanied by his family. It is Mr. Munhall's intention to take up his residence in Philadelphia, expecting to devote his future to labors in the east.

The Indianapolis News says that a universal well reaches the state health board office to the effect that the doctors are threatened with starvation. There is comparatively no sickness in the state. The usual summer diseases have not developed, and as for that long promised outbreak of cholera it has been postponed another year. Children's diseases have not been numerous reported, and up to date the ratio of fatalities, compared with various years, is light.

HOT CORN FOR FOWLS.

A correspondent writes: "If you want to make your fowls feel good and thankful give them hot corn for supper—just as hot as they can eat it. To find out how hot it should be pick up a handful and hold it tightly in your closed hand; if it burns, of course it is too hot, but if after holding it a minute it makes your hand feel warm and nice it is just right. To heat the corn put it in an iron pan or kettle in the stove oven and stir it occasionally. If your wife has biscuit in the oven you better put the kettle on the back part of the stove and stir the corn often. Mind now, I don't mean that you are to put water in with the corn; I mean hot, dry corn. If some kernels at the bottom of the kettle should get scorched, or even charred, the hens will eat it, and it will do them good, too."

Regret that many of their patrons did not receive as much attention on Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, as they wished, but it was impossible to do better with such a multitude to wait upon. Several salesmen were absent on vacation, but we have arranged to have the full staff on hand for the balance of this week and everyone can have prompt attention during the remainder of the sale.

BILL HALEY.

There is Still a Determination to Lynch Him.

The excitement attending the attempted lynching of Bill Haley at Paulding Thursday night does not abate with time, and the citizens expect a revivification tonight. The prevailing sentiment is that Haley must hang, and from all appearances the execution will be performed by citizens of Paulding county at large. The strictest secrecy as to Haley and his whereabouts is enforced, and outside of one or two officials nothing is known as to him. The jail is closed against any and all visitors, making much speculation. By some it was thought he was not a mile from the jail Thursday night, and that he is now back. Others believe him to have been taken to Van Wert or Lima, but when no one knows, neither has any member of the mob been recognized.

The Wilcox was fined $10 and costs, $25 in all, for selling liquor after 11 o'clock.

The warm weather often has a depressing and debilitating effect. Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes all languor and lassitude.

"Daddy!" yelled the president to his secretary, "order me a case of No. 10 shoes from Vordermark's, Fort Wayne, Ind." And Daddy did.
